

Contents

List of Figures	vii
List of Acronyms	ix
Introduction. Science and Media in Cold War Europe Mariana Ivanova and Juliane Scholz	1
Part I. Institutional and Industrial Contexts
Chapter 1. Whitewashing the Nazi Past: Continuity and Transformation in Scientific Cinematography in Germany, 1934–56 Juliane Scholz	25
Chapter 2. Flow Vis for the Space Race: German Science Films in US Education during the Cold War Mario Schulze	50
Chapter 3. Raw Film Manufacturing in East Germany: Between Economic Efficiency and Environmental Awareness Josephine Diecke	71
Part II. Imaginaries of Self and Other
Chapter 4. Between Cooperation and Competition: Cold War Imaginaries and Representations of US-Soviet Encounters in Space Darina Volf	95
Chapter 5. Postcolonial Science Heroes in East German Science-Fiction Films Evan Torner	118

Chapter 6. The Culture of Anticipation and Scientific Fiction in Socialist Romania Doru Aurel Pop	137
Chapter 7. (Un)Healthy Tunes: Body, Mind, and Music on Socialist Television Sandra Schnädelbach	158
Part III. Science in Public and Educational Media
Chapter 8. Science for Children and Adults: The Space Race in Italian Communist Party Publications, 1957–64 Ettore Costa	183
Chapter 9. “Effective Films”: Science Film and Education in East Germany Sophia Gräfe and Kerrin von Engelhardt	204
Chapter 10. German Technology and Education for “Young Nations”: Cold War Politics and Aesthetics of Development Aid in Two West German Governmental PR Films of 1961 Jan Uelzmann	230
Chapter 11. French Educational Film Production for African Countries, 1960s–70s Sarah Stein	252